

Sept. 15

College Essay Writing Night

The program is intended for teens and adults and registration is suggested. To register, call 609.924.9529, ext. 240 or drop by the Youth Services Department on the third floor.

Those trying to figure out what to write on a college admission essay or wondering how admissions officers react when they read these essays will want to attend this session featuring Sheherazade Essack, assistant director of admissions at Princeton University; Shelley Krause, a college counselor from Rutgers Preparatory School; and Meg Caddeau, a teacher at Stuart Country Day School. The panel will offer approaches and strategies for students writing an essay and provide suggestions on how parents can be helpful throughout the process.
